Dear Mr. Mark

Do you think that kids should have a break from school? Kids need some time to enjoy life outside of school, don't you think? Well, read more to find out why we should not have school in the summer!

Kids should not have school in the summer because they have an opportunity to go to camp! At camp they can experience going on field trips like to Stone Barns, Wave hill, and the Botanical Gardens! Also, Kids can improve their skills in sports and learn how to be aggressive and competitive and share the ball in Basketball, football, or soccer. Kids can also build relationships with new kids that aren't at their schools! If I did not convince you yet, then read the next paragraph!

Another example of why we should not have school in the summer is because kids will have time to spend time with their relatives like their Grandpa, Grandma, or their cousins that you don't get to see all year. You want me to see my relatives, right?

My final example of why we should not have school in the summer is that kids can improve their skills in sports and board games so that they can learn how to be aggressive, and Competitive in sports like Basketball and soccer. Also kids can improve their brain by playing games like chess. I hope this convinced you of why we should not have school in the summer!

I know that some people might say that over the school year we don't get as much education as other students in this world do, well we can get challenging work over the school year so that we can become as smart as other students in the world. If you say that we already have school breaks over the weekend why do we need a break in the summer? Pretend we wanted to travel to Europe from New York but we won't have enough time in only two days.

Sincerely,

Aidan
